"After the march through the heart of the Boer country, a march which will remain a glorious tradition in the annals of the Anglo-Saxon race centuries hence, Dr. Jameson, with his force of 500 or 600 men, has surrendered within two hours of 15,000 armed men he had come to help. He was fighting for two days without food, without water, without sleep, hoping against hope for belp which never came, but which the committee, we are assured, honestly believed he did not require. So ends the desperate, abominable, outrageous raid of the lion-hearted Jameson, an ignominious ending, surely, ignominious to others, but most certainly not to him.

Coal Gas and the Vanishing Forests.

Coal Gas and the Vanishing Forests.

The scientists are devoting much attention to the widespread theory that the earth's atmosphere is becoming seriously affected by the enormous quantity of coal that is converted into carbonic acid gas—the natural enemy of human beings.

Along with this poison gas which is being generated in a thousand smoky cities and through other sources all over the world, comes the steady cutting down of forests, the leaves of which are the natural absorbents of the poisonous gas.

General Wistar, who is said to be the highest authority in the matter, is so deeply interested in the subject that he is making great efforts to call the attention of the scientific world to it, and he believes that the growing bronchial troubles and epidemics like the grip, all over the world have an ultimate connection with it.

How much the present enormous generation of carbonic acid gas can affect the whole body of the atmosphere science will ascertain just as soon as it applies itself to the problem in carnest.

At all events the great efforts now being made to preserve the forests are worthy of every encouragement. The planting of trees in cities, the development of extensive and well wooded park systems, the planting of targe groves of timber in the vicinity of towns and cities, are all calculated to assist in the absorption of the superabundance of carbonic acid gas with which, according to the scientists, our atmosphere is becoming dangerously overcharged.—Min-

Wisdom, strength and beauty should be manifested in the life and action of every votary of the craft. These qualities are needed by every profession and in every stage of life, wisdom to plan, strength to earry out the plans and beauty to adorn life's great work.

The temple question, which has been before the grand ledge of Arkansas for several years, has been finally disposed of by the adoption of a plan to set apart $2 for all the first degrees and $1 for all the second and third degrees conterred in the subordinate ledges of the state as a temple fund. The delt now hanging over the lodge for the temple amounts to nearly $50,000, which will be paid in 10 years. There is general rejoicing among the fraternity over the disposition of this vexed question.
